Dubai set to debut new 200mph supercar

by Andy Sambidge on Tuesday, 15 December 2009

A new supercar, capable of a top speed of more than 200mph, will be launched by its US maker at the Dubai International Motor Show, which starts on Wednesday.

FAST CAR: The Motion supercar which is to be unveiled at the Dubai International Motor Show.

Kepler Motors, founded by world speed record holder Russ Wicks, will unveil its Motion supercar at the show, the company said in a statement.

Only 50 Motions will be produced with ownership going to a small, exclusive group of individuals, some of which may come from the Middle East region.

Each vehicle will be hand assembled and deliveries are set to start in 2011.

The Motion will be able to reach 60mph in under 2.5 seconds with a top speed over 200 mph, the statement added.

"We're delighted to host the worldwide debut of the Kepler Motors Motion at the Dubai International Motor Show," said Wicks.

"The region has a passion for ultra high performance, limited edition supercars, and presents the ideal platform to showcase the advanced technology and innovative features of the Motion."

The Motion features extensive use of carbon fibre composite materials for its chassis and body in a bid to keep weight to a minimum.
